

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

New nonfiction film 1

A certain ratio (of negation) 7

Acts of experimentation ... 10

1 Nonfiction as a speculative mode of inquiry: Subjectivity and the films of Ben Rivers and Ben Russell 17

Not documentary ... 18

The mechanistic “in itself”/the speculative treatment of subjectivity ... 24

Part II 28

A film about a film within a film adapted from a short story ... 28

A marriage of form and content 30

“I don’t care about the Other. I am the Other.” 34

2 (Self as) modèle environments: Nonfiction film 37

Into the abyss 40

“What”—“Who” 50

3 The utopian promise: John Akomfrah’s poetics of the archive 55

The time of nonfiction 56

A poet (in and) of the archive 62

Back to a future 67

The time for promises 70

Conclusion 71

- 4 “In my mind, my dreams are real”: Abbas Kiarostami and the roots of new nonfiction film 73
Before the law 86
The becoming reality of fiction ... 92
Kiarostami meets Erol Morris/Makhmalbaf meets Sabzian 96
Now, it's nothing but flowers 101
Real traumas/traumas of the real: The Koker trilogy 104
The marriage of fiction and non-fiction 111
- 5 After Kiarostami: Cinemas of (speculative) nonfiction 117
Cinema of trauma 118
Trauma and speculative nonfiction 123
In search of the in itself 129
A documentary fallacy 132
The earth won't listen 133
- 6 Nonfiction, the cognitive turn, and Chantal Akerman's D'Est (1993) 141
Bordering on fiction 145
The displaced m(Other) 157
Metal repairs 159
- 7 The poetic mode, depiction, and nonfiction: Sense-value and Gideon Koppel's sleep furiously 165
To document ... (or) ... to depict 173
To speak or not to speak: The double entendre 176
The art of the document 178
- Conclusion 181
Cinema will save us 181
The three S's 187
A final note ... 189
- Filmography* 191
References 193
Index 201