

Table of Contents

Preface	9
A Personal Journey towards and through Albania and Its Cinema
Acknowledgements	15
Introduction	19
Albania—the context for a little-known cinema
Some words on the Balkans at large and at small	21
Albania in a postcolonial context	23
Additional words on the complete isolation of Albania	26
The arts in Albania	32
Albanian cinema and the project of this book	34
Films chosen for discussion and analysis	36
Structure of the book	37
I. The Roots of Cinema in Albania	47
The Ottoman period, independence, and the Fascist occupation
A sequel as a prequel	48
Pictures—still and moving	49
The Manaki brothers	52
Early filming in Albania	58
Mihallaq Mone	64
II. The Birth and Development of a Socialist Cinema	71
Albania and the Soviet Union	73
Soviet films as entertainment	75
Early Albanian newsreels and documentaries	76
The training of young film professionals in Moscow and linguistic and continued cultural ties between Albania and the Soviet Union	80
Sergei Yutkevich's Luftëtari i madh i Shqipërisë Skënderbeu/ Великий воин Албании Скандербег/The Great Warrior Skander- beg : A Soviet-Albanian coproduction	84
Another level of documentary: Endri Keko	92
Innovation silenced: Viktor Stratobërdha	95
From documentary to storytelling: Hysen Hykani's Her Children	97
Kinostudio's first feature film: Kristaq Dhamo's Tana	99

Kristaq Dhamo: A coproduction with the Soviet Union	102
III. The Flourishing of Kinostudio	107
Albania's rapprochement with China and Albanian films during the Cultural Revolution	108
Enver Hoxha on the arts in a socialist society	112
Continued work in documentary	115
Hysen Hasani's DEBATIK : Children and vigilance	121
Feature films of the early to 1960s through 1976	125
Ngadhënim mbi vdekjen /Victory over Death (1967): Heroines of the partisan movement	129
Dhimitër Anagnosti's Duel i heshtur /Silent Duel (1967): A Cold War thriller	134
Viktor Gjika's Clear Horizons /Horizonte të hapura: A hero of the working class	139
Viktor Gjika's Rrugë të bardha /White Roads: The New Man re-explored	144
Fehmi Hoshafi and Muhhareme Fejzo's Kapedani /The Captain (1972): In communist Albania, women had the last laugh	146
Imagining Albania's landscape, both bucolic and harsh	150
Dhimitër Anagnosti's Lulëkuqet mbi mure /Red Poppies on the Wall: Totalitarianism defied	153
IV. A Cinema in Isolation	161
Historical context of the years of isolation	163
Thematic diversity of Albanian cinema in the period of isolation	165
Xhanfise Keko's children's films	168
Music and national identity	173
Piro Milkani and Kujtim Çashku's Ballë për ballë /Face to Face: Nostalgia for Soviet friendship	177
Kujtim Çashku's Dora e ngrohtë /The Warm Hand: A wayward youth redeemed	187
V. Kinostudio in the Post-Hoxha Era	191
Ramiz Alia's Albania	192
Late Kinostudio productions	193
Adaptations of Kadare	194
A stance against corruption	201
Esat Musliu's Rrethi i kujtesës /The Circle of Memory (1987): Post-traumatic stress and memory loss	203

Eduard Makri's Shpella e piratëve/The Pirate Cave (1990): Childhood and adventure	206
Some Words in Conclusion	211
Towards an Albanian cinema of postcommunism
Esat Musliu's Vitet e pritjes/Years of Waiting (1990): Emigration and women	213
Towards the future	218
Bibliography	221
Filmography	235
Index	241