

Note on Transcriptions	ix
Prologue	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction	1
Part 1: Decolonizing Central Asia: Film Structures and Representations (1919–27)
Part 1 Introduction: Turkestan Prior to the Birth of the Soviet Union: Revolts and Colonial Revolution	25
1 Cultural Autonomy and the Nation (1919–24)	28
2 Revolutionary Exoticism and the Colonial Imaginary: Cinema and Entertainment (1924–27)	54
Part 2: Cultural Revolution and Its Paradoxes: Nation, Modernity, and Empire (1927–31)
Part 2 Introduction: Cinematographic Cultural Revolution	85
3 The National Cinematographic Sphere	89
4 Uzbek Film and the Shift toward Imperial Domination	123
Part 3: The Paradoxes of the Nationalities Policy: Nationalism versus Internationalism (1931–37)
Part 3 Introduction: Working as an Uzbek Artist under Stalin: Ambivalence, Resistance, and Nationalism	161
5 The Nationalist Cinematographic Imaginary: Subjugating Class to Nation	164
6 The Empire of the Proletariat: Subjugating Nation to Class	199

Conclusion	228
Appendix	233
Glossary	239
Notes	243
Sources and Selected Bibliography	271
Index	289