

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xv
INTRODUCTION	xvii
CHAPTER 1: GETTING STARTED	1
EXIT STRATEGIES	3
Preparing to Leave School and Begin Your Screenwriting Career
▶ By Gabrielle Kelly
TEN ACTIONS YOU CAN TAKE	11
To Be an Active Hero in Your Career
▶ By Jen Grisanti
IMPRESSING THE DEVELOPMENT EXECUTIVE	19
▶ By Trai Cartwright
WRITING FOR TELEVISION	28
What It Takes
▶ An Interview With Fern Field Brooks

WHERE DO YOU BEGIN?	34
Notes From the Screenwriting Guru
▶ An Interview With Erik Bork
FROM WRITER'S ASSISTANT TO SHOWRUNNER	42
Interning, Knocking on Doors, and Making Connections
▶ An Interview With Stacy A. Littlejohn
CHAPTER 2: STICKING IT OUT	53
THE SCREENWRITER'S JOURNEY	55
▶ By Pat Verducci
WHAT IS A PITCH . . . ?	65
And Why and How Do You Do It?
▶ By Joshua Malkin
BUILDING A SCREENWRITING CAREER	76
Advice From the Entertainment Career Coach
▶ An Interview With Carole Kirschner
A SCRIPT READER'S PERSPECTIVE	83
How to Love What You Do When You Can't Do What You Love
▶ By James Napoli
THE ART OF DISCIPLINE AND PERSISTENCE	89
Moving Toward Creative Success
▶ An Interview With Anne Fontaine
A VETERAN PRODUCER'S TAKE ON SCREENWRITING	95
An Interview With Bruce Gilbert
▶ By Chuck Erven

NEGATIVE FEEDBACK	101
How to Find the Positive
▶ By Hugo Van Laere
CHAPTER 3: FINDING SUCCESS	109
BUILDING YOUR TEAM	112
Insights From the Screenwriting Consultant
▶ An Interview With Linda Seger
INDEPENDENT FILMMAKING	119
Working With an Independent Film Producer
▶ An Interview With Mary Jane Skalski
DECIDING WHAT TO WRITE	127
▶ By Kira-Anne Pelican
A WORKING SCREENWRITER'S JOURNEY IN AUSTRALIA	137
▶ By Susan Macgillicuddy
THE PATH TO WRITING AN ICONIC FILM	146
Navigating the Business of Hollywood
▶ An Interview With Barry Morrow
CHAPTER 4: GETTING AHEAD	157
A BOLD MOVE	159
Running With an Unexpected Story
▶ An Interview With Mary Harron

SURVIVING AND THRIVING IN HOLLYWOOD	167
Eight Principles to Empower Your Writing and Your Life
▶ By Jim Jennewein
FROM CREATIVITY TO CRAFT IN SCREENWRITING	176
▶ By Mark Readman
WRITING FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE	185
A Strategy of Forward Motion
▶ An Interview With Claudia Llosa
RISKS AND REWARDS	190
Following a Passion
▶ An Interview With Jay Paul Deratany
SCREENWRITING AND MENTAL FITNESS	198
Thoughts From a Mental Health Professional
▶ An Interview With David Silverman
CHAPTER 5: STARTING AGAIN	205
REINVENTION	208
Writing the Next Great Script
▶ By William Rabkin
ART VS. COMMERCE	218
The Cage Match in My Brain Continues
▶ By Shalom Auslander
EVERYTHING I NEED TO KNOW ABOUT A CAREER IN HOLLYWOOD . . .	223
I Learned From Writing Scripts
▶ By Rosanne Welch

STARTING OVER IN AMERICA	230
From Writing to Directing and Back Again
▶ An Interview With Kirsten Sheridan
LIFE LESSONS IN WRITING FOR YOUNG AUDIENCES	238
Wisdom From the Head Writer for Sesame Street
▶ An Interview With Lou Berger
INDEX	249

I would like to thank you for this book. First, I am deeply grateful to the cartoonists who jumped on board so perfectly. It was a true pleasure to reconnect with old friends, make new friends and colleagues, and spend time with some of the film and television professionals I most admire. They took a portion of their busy schedules to share their perspective and expertise, which is being the great partners of life. I must also acknowledge the many administrators who graciously allowed us to include their work in this book. Thank you, too, to the illustrators for contributing the extraordinary original illustrations in Chapter 5.

Thank you to my friends, colleagues, and mentors who supported or influenced this project from the outset and onward. University of California Merced's Peer-Oriented Faculty members Kate Anger, Joshua Maklin, Ed Rakitic, and David Salzman are not only all-around good humans, but they're consistently great sheep and beyond great mentors that I can count. Several additional people came in early to read the proposal for this book and journal, as well as early proposals for other projects, their feedback was precious. Thank you to Tom Cartwright, Lisa Chaves, Lee Michael Cohn, Chuck Evers, Seth Hoffman, Jim Isaacson, Kevin Jones, Bruce Lipton, and Chad Parsons. Thanks also to Chris Berger, Claude Freeman, Mark Fursetman, Wendy Peterson, Allison Phillips, Cindy Reed, Annie Stewart, and Carol Whaley for hiring me, inspiring me, or any combination of the two. Thank you to Barry Mitts and Andy Zelen for an incredible opportunity. To my Paul Derman, Conde Hardin, Mandy Goldman, Cliff Wilson, Jeff Wood, and Hilary Wray for watching me more than my million cups of coffee and cocktail time to discuss this project in a unified

To my students at Auburn University, thank you for providing perspective, motivation, and laughter. To Auburn Media Studies faculty members George Plachos and Patricia Isaacson, thank you for the support in the early stages of this project.