

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
1. Introduction	1
The semiotics of the view	1
Eco-critical practices	3
The indivisibility of the human subject and nature	4
The text	6
The parameters	14
Author's note	15
2. The Terms of Engagement	19
Landscape, space and place	19
Inside and outside	22
The ethnographic eye and documentary: Negotiations of the real	22
The contested status of the real	23
Taking a step back – crossing over	24
3. The Invention of Landscape	27
Landscape, the antithesis of city life	27
The sublime, the spiritual and the indifference of nature	29
The picturesque and the pastoral	30
The return of the picturesque and the romantic sublime	32
4. The Social Construction of Landscape	34
National identity, society and history	34
Framing trauma in the landscape	35
Property, ownership, colonialism and class identity	37

5. Landscape Subjectivities	41
Do you see what I see?	41
The perceiving subject	43
A template for seeing, touching, hearing and feeling	43
Emotion, affect and sensation in nature	44
6. Painted Landscapes	48
The tools of the trade	48
Taking the eye for a walk – perspectives in painting	49
The great outdoors	51
7. Frames and Sequences	53
Photographing the view	53
Slide-tape: Landscape in series	55
8. Talking Pictures: Narrative, Time, Colour and Sound	62
‘Nature caught in the act’	62
Narrative film: Background and foreground	64
The time base	68
Colour and black-and-white	72
Sound and silence	73
9. Talking Pictures: Framing the View and the Spectator	82
Framing the view	82
Point of view: The restless eye	83
The spectator	87
10. Artists’ Moving Image	92
‘Unmade Narratives’: Experimental film	92
Video: The travelling companion	96
Digital media: No man’s land	100
Photogénie and the entanglement of matter	104
11. Weather-Blown Film	111
River Yar (1971–72), William Raban and Chris Welsby	111
Theory: Clouds and clocks	113

CONTENTS

Wind Vane (1972), Chris Welsby	115
Feedback: Cybernetics	117
12. Being-With: Rocks, Sea and Sky	120
La Région Centrale (1971), Michael Snow	120
Aspect (2004), Emily Richardson	121
Sea-changed film: R.V. Ramani and David Gatten	124
This Is My Land (2006), Ben Rivers	127
Dawn Burn (1975–76), Mary Lucier	128
Interwoven Motion (2004), Chris Meigh-Andrews	129
The wide blue yonder: Semiconductor, Susan Collins, James Turrell and James Benning	132
13. Getting the Shivers: Empathic Projection and the Elements	138
Jack Lauder and Lloyd Branson, Zacharias Kunuk, Oscar Muñoz, Bill Viola, Joan Jonas and William Raban	138
14. Anti-Terrain: Australasia and the ‘Vexed’ Question of Landscape	147
Preconceptions	147
The antipodean gaze	150
Refiguring landscapes	153
Imagining a future	159
15. Landscape and Identity Politics	163
Signatures	163
Slavery and the African Diaspora: The Black body in the landscape	165
Mother Earth	170
Queering the landscape	177
Fault lines – masculinity	181
16. Performing the Landscape	193
Acting out in Merrie England	193
Performing matter	196
Shifting the scenery	199

LANDSCAPE AND THE MOVING IMAGE

17. Animals	205
A pantomime of animals	205
Captive animals: A transaction of the gaze	211
‘Companion animals’	215
Cruelty to animals	217
Discreet courtship	219
18. Postscript	227
References	231
Index	253