

Contents

List of Archives and Their Abbreviations	ix
List of Figures	x
Acknowledgments	xii

Introduction: Nonlinear historicizing as a method for studying health films 1

Health films through the lenses of critical heritage studies and critical public health 1

Health films as structure and agency of public policy 4

The limits and options for historicizing health films in Eastern Europe 6

The historical time of health films in Eastern Europe 9

The event time of health films: The structure of the book 14

PART I

Child and nation in the focus of rescue-mission health films 25

1 The interwar obsession with family: Eugenic pathos vs. humanistic skepticism 27

The (im)possibility of the mission to rescue the child in interwar discursive practices 27

Traditional family values in the eugenic and anti-eugenic rhetoric of Hollywood family films 29

*The deconstruction of residential care in The kid by Charlie Chaplin* 31

2 Collective care vs. the “backward” family in *Jak Vašíček přišel k nohám 36

The brotherhood of the disabled captures Czech screens and

vi Contents

- Jak Vašíček přišel k nohám as a model of public politics concerning people with disabilities 40
- 3 The institutionalized child as a precondition for the healthy nation in the films of Mladen Širola 44
Zapuštено dijete, Pomoć u pravi čas and Spas male Zorice: Three trajectories for institutionalizing children 44
Gender, religion and class in film metaphors about irresponsible parenting 48
- 4 Central and Eastern European film in the search for deconstructing the institutionalized child 54
The critical reception of residential care for children within global and national campaigns for family care 54
Lilika: An Eastern European response to the issue of youth in social policy and culture 59
The individualistic loneliness of a child vs. collective care in late socialist Czech films 62
A renaissance in rescue-mission films after 1989 with the aim of delegitimizing the socialist past 66
- PART 2
- Health films for teaching children 71
- 5 The complex legacy of early animated health films in Eastern Europe 73
Picturing germs in animated health films 73
Puppet theater as a vehicle of health propaganda 80
- 6 Bacilínek (1922) on the stage of the national and global orders of health security 88
Bacilínek: The inception of the magical contagion genre in health propaganda 88
The cultural war between Bacilínek and anti-scientism 91
- 7 Health films for children: Between cultural reciprocity and popular scientism 98
Western health animation for children in the service of social and biological awareness 98
Kašpárek kouzelníkem: Our children deserve more care than

- Kašpárek a Budulínek: A health film to save future generations and national manufacturers 104
 Campek nevaljalac: The indisputable values of personal cleanliness in controversial times of political pollution 109

PART 3

- Men and women in the focus of health films 113
- 8 Health films as Bildungsroman for teaching men 115
The options and limits of health films for men in the late 1910s 115
Multi-focus narration in Il était une fois trois amis and Damaged lives 121
Osudná chvíle as a health Bildungsroman for men 127
Double Bildungsroman in Czech and international health film 133
- 9 Masculinity in health films for the rural population 142
The health education of peasants as a manifestation of progressive agrarianism 142
Representations of masculinity in Dva brata: film o sušuci 147
Exposure to toxic masculinity as a strategy of health propaganda 150
Manhood against infections in Pošast: film o tifusu 154
- 10 Health films in the service of eugenic surveillance over women 163
Eugenic patriarchalism in child welfare propaganda 163
Sentimental health education in Dvije seke: film o njezi dojenčadi 166
Criminalizing abortion in Griješnice: Macina i Ankina sudbina 168
Eugenic pronatalism in Manželství pod drobnohledem 172

PART 4

- Health films for the interwar periphery 181
- 11 Stín ve světle as the first health film for the periphery: The birth of the canon 183
Crossing the border of the periphery as a deadly and dangerous

viii Contents

The ant personality as an agent of progress for the periphery	186
Human bondage in the periphery: A way of civilizing "nature people"	189
Public health as a part of the new régime of authenticity: Uniting people in the fight against trachoma	195
12 Ikina sudbina and Dobro za zlo: Extending the canon of health films to the Muslim periphery	202
Endemic syphilis as a long-term enemy of the Yugoslav periphery: The socialist upgrade of colonial motives	202
The ant personality as a "sun" person: An unattainable ideal of the peripheral individual in Dobro za zlo	208
The peripheral community as a social organism: The power of intergenerational responsibility in Yugoslav films	212
13 Films of the National Tuberculosis Association: Rooting health films for the periphery in the racial hierarchies of the interwar United States	217
Films against tuberculosis for ethnic minorities: A case of multiple pragmatics	217
More health films for "others": Ulmer's "poaching" of films produced for the periphery	219
Let my people live: Lifting the Veil of Ignorance?	222
Cloud in the Sky: A nearly enlightened community of happy and healthy people	224
The Light Ahead: Moving beyond the boundaries of health films produced for the periphery	227
Another to Conquer: Become civilized at any price?	230
Conclusion: Health film as fantasy and event	237
Bibliography	242
Filmography to the book	265
Index	268