

1	Introduction	1
Part I Women and the Holocaust: The Silenced Gender?
2	The Silenced Gender Paradigm	23
3	Breaking the Silence on Women Perpetrators	37
4	Idealised or Ignored: Female Victims of the Holocaust	53
5	Invisible Resistance: Women's Contribution	71
Part II The Cinematic Representation of Women as Perpetrators and Accomplices of Nazism
6	Violent, Erotic, Brainwashed: Stereotypes of Female Perpetrators in Holocaust Films between 1945 and 2000	83
7	Uneven Representations: Complex Men and Poorly Drawn Women	101

8	“Ordinary Women” as Perpetrators in Twenty-First-Century Holocaust Cinema	113
Part III Female Victims in Holocaust Films: From Universalised Portrayals to Recovered Memory
9	Universalised Victims: Jewish Women in Early Holocaust Films	133
10	The Jewish Woman as the Epitome of Holocaust Victimhood in the 1960s	147
11	Newcomers to Holocaust Cinema: Women in Crisis, Second Generation, Sexual Abuse and Other Victims of Persecution	161
12	The Trauma of (Post)Memory: Women’s Memories in the Holocaust Cinema of the New Millennium	179
Part IV Gendering Heroism: The Role of Women in Filmic Discourses About Resistance
13	Patriarchal Perspectives on Jewish Female Heroism	207
14	The Role of Heroines in Coming to Terms with the Past in Germany and France	219
15	Gendered Disparities in the Portrayal of Rescuers	235
Part V Towards a Conclusion: Researching the Representation of Women in European Holocaust Films
16	Conclusion	251
	Index	269